Streamed on July 11, 2026

Episode 13 - OCCAM'S RAZOR Streamed on July 11, 2026 Occam's razor and the question everyone has been asking. Are Karen and Clint Bobo lying?

0:07

There's a principle investigators use, though rarely by name. When you have competing explanations for the same set of facts, the one that requires the fewest assumptions tends to be correct.

0:20

Not always, but often enough that it functions as a useful discipline, a check against the human tendency to layer interpretation on top of interpretation until the original evidence is buried under the weight of what we decided it meant.

0:37

Occam's razor, the simplest explanation consistent with the facts.

0:44

This episode is about what happens when that principle gets applied late. When a case develops a shape early, a suspect, a theory, a lens, and the evidence gets read through that shape rather than on its own terms.

1:01

In the disappearance of Holly Bobo, there is a version of events that has always been sitting in the record. In the phone data, in the cell tower registrations, in the observations of a young man who woke up to a barking dog on a cold April morning and watched something he has spent years trying to describe accurately.

1:25

The question isn't whether new evidence changes anything. The question is whether the existing evidence was ever fully seen.

1:35

Most people who follow this case have spent years thinking about Terry Britt, about the cadaver canine alerts on his vehicles, tools, and shed.

1:46

About the conversation where he told a US marshal, "Sounds like you got it all figured out," and offered to plead to it.

1:56

about the wire tap where his wife walked him through what he was supposed to say he did that day because he couldn't remember and about his documented history of predatory violence against women.

2:09

About the alibi that collapsed under scrutiny before it was even fully tested.

2:15

Terry Britt is not the subject of this episode. Not because the record on Britt has changed. It hasn't. but because something else has come into view.

2:27

What follows is a reconstruction of the morning in sequence, grounded in phone records, carrier call data, witness accounts, and documented investigative materials. For now, this is the Bobo family's morning, exactly as it looked before anyone started asking questions about it. Holly Bobo had been awake since before the sun came up. She was 20 years old, a nursing student at the University of Tennessee at Martin's Parson's satellite campus, and she had a final exam that morning. When her mother had checked on her the night before, she was studying.

When Karen came through again before leaving for work, Holly was still at the kitchen table, showered, dressed, notes spread out in front of her. She wore jeans and a pink t-shirt. Her hair was damp, textured in the way naturally curly hair looks when it dries on its own, scrunched with product.

Holly had not slept a lot. The night before had ended in the familiar friction of a young relationship negotiating trust, messages that moved between closeness and anxiety, concerns about sources of competition for one another's attention, the kind of conversation that doesn't fully resolve before one person finally falls asleep.

At 5:03 a.m., she sent Drew a text message.

3:54

The message read, "No, I swear to God." Whatever question that answered, she sent it before sunrise from the kitchen table while her family slept. Dana Bobo was the first to leave. He had a job at McKenzie Tree Service, and his day started early. He was gone before 6:00 a.m. truckloaded, heading out to a job site in Lynen, Perry County. Clint Bobo, Holly's brother, had no particular reason to be up. He had an internship on Wednesdays normally, but his supervisor was out that day, so he had the day off.

4:29

He'd gone to bed around 11 p.m. the night before and was asleep by roughly midnight. He planned to sleep in and start homework when he woke. Karen Bobo prepared for school.

4:41

She taught second grade at Scots Hill Elementary. Her mornings were structured. Out the door by 7, phone in hand, commute calibrated to the bell.

4:52

Before she left, she let the family dog out. While she stood outside for a moment, [snorts] she heard a truck pass on the road, loud muffler moving fast, and registered it as nothing in particular.

Karen's mornings almost always included a call to her friend Tina. That Wednesday was no different. Records show the call began at 7:01 a.m. and lasted 14 minutes. A routine conversation, the kind that fills a commute without leaving much trace and memory.

5:23

Afterward, she arrived at the school and parked. Normally, she would have walked straight inside, but something Holly had texted her during the drive had flagged a small problem that needed to be resolved before the school day started.

5:39

At 7:05 a.m., Holly [snorts] sent Drew a message.

5:44

It said, "Let me tell you something. I have studied till I can't possibly study anymore for this test." That sounds like a tired nursing student at the end of a long night of reviewing pharmacology.

5:57

Nothing in the message suggests fear or urgency beyond the exam she was preparing to take that morning. Holly had been in contact with her mother about a problem involving Drew's turkey hunting. Drew and his father, Harold Scott, who went by, had apparently encountered difficulty that morning on a property in the Bath Springs area owned by Karen's mother, Donna Goth. There was a dispute over who had permission to hunt the land, and Holly wanted her mother to smooth it out before it escalated.

Karen, not wanting any problems for Holly's boyfriend, stayed in her car in the school parking lot to work the phones before going inside. She called her mother to sort it out. During this same window, carrier records show a rapid back and forth between Holly's number and Drew's. A series of short attempts, none of them connecting for any meaningful duration.

6:51

The sequence unfolds as follows.

6:55

7:18 Drew calls Holly. 0 seconds. 7:19 Holly calls Drew. 0 seconds.

7:04

7:21 Drew calls Holly. 0 seconds. 7:25.

7:12

Holly calls Drew. 1 second.

7:15

7:28 Drew calls Holly. 0 seconds.

7:20

7:29 Holly calls Drew. 0 seconds.

7:26

Two phones trying repeatedly to reach each other, neither connecting. We will come back to this sequence. It turns out to be more significant than any of us realized.

7:37

After speaking with her mother to get the hunting permission issue sorted, Karen called Drew directly.

7:44

That call Karen to Drew connected at 7:31 a.m. and lasted 94 seconds.

7:52

During the call, Karen reassured Drew she had spoken to her mother and there was no issue. Karen understood herself to be stepping in to resolve an active situation unfolding in real time at the Bass Springs property. That belief that she was fixing a problem that was currently happening is important because it shaped everything that followed.

8:15

After she hung up, Karen rushed across the parking lot and entered the school to meet her second graders. She was a few minutes late, but the problem, as far as she knew, was handled. At 7:33 a.m., Holly again attempts to call Drew. No answer.

8:32

After that, Holly's phone went silent for exactly 6 minutes.

8:38

The line that had been running all morning, Holly to Drew, Drew to Holly, Holly to Karen, Karen to Drew, stopped completely.

8:47

That same moment, something else happened. Chad Marshall called Clint Bobo at 7:33 and 18 seconds. The call wasn't unusual. Chad called Clint in the morning sometimes. Clint silenced it and kept sleeping.

9:04

Down the road, James Edward Barnes was loading his work truck. He was getting ready to head out for the day when he heard a young woman's voice coming from the direction of the Bobo property.

9:15

Do you remember what you heard or what words you heard?

9:20

Sound like she was arguing with somebody and she said stop, but I said stop. Okay. Stop. I said stop.

9:26

Yeah. And at that when you heard that, did it sound frantic to you or did you just think someone was messing around?

9:34

It sound like she was arguing with somebody she knew. I mean, it didn't sound nothing serious really. I mean, at that point, yeah.

9:41

Okay. Did something happen or did you hear additional screams later that made you actually walk to the tree line?

9:46

Yeah, she kind of cut out midscream and it just didn't sound right. And so and my dogs were raising canes, so I kind of went over there to see what was going on. And like I said, I couldn't see anything from where I was at.

10:02

Barnes quickly finished packing his remaining tools and supplies, loaded his girlfriend and their small child into the truck, and drove up the road to the Bobo property before heading out for work.

10:14

He pulled into the lower portion of the driveway, shutting off his engine for over a minute, listening for further signs of trouble. The yard appeared quiet. Noticing nothing obviously wrong, he pulled back out, but what he had heard stayed with him.

10:32

Once back down the road, he called his mother, Kathy Wise. He told her about the screams and asked her to get a hold of Karen and make her aware.

10:41

Phone carrier records logged that call at 7:47 a.m.

10:47

What woke Clint was the family dog, Rascal.

10:51

Rascal barked at delivery trucks, passing vehicles, anyone pulling into the driveway.

10:58

Morning barking wasn't unusual.

11:01

Clint lay there for about 10 minutes, hoping the dog would stop. He recalled being sure he heard Ed Barn's truck pass by at some point.

11:11

Rascal kept barking, so Clint eventually got up. He moved through the dark house.

11:17

He hadn't turned on any lights. The television in his bedroom was still on behind the closed door. He went to the front sidelight windows first. Nothing unusual.

11:29

He walked into the living room and heard voices in the carport, a male and a female. He recognized Holly's voice.

11:38

The male voice sounded familiar, too.

11:41

The cadence of it, the tone. It sounded the way Clint was used to hearing Drew's voice through his bedroom wall when Drew and Holly would be talking in the other room.

11:51

He went to the window. Through the partially closed Venetian blinds, he could see two figures kneeling in the carport area, facing each other, one male, one female. The male was wearing camouflage, head to toe, including a face covering. He was talking calm, measured a few words at a time. Holly was answering in single words. She sounded upset, like maybe they were breaking up.

12:19

Holly's car was still under the carport.

12:22

That struck him as odd. She should have left for school by now. Holly needed to leave home by 7:45 a.m.

12:30 to make it to the Parson's campus of UT Martin by 8:00 a.m. It wasn't like Holly to be late. He tried twice to call Karen, but she didn't pick up. Those unanswered calls registered at 7:51 and 7:52 a.m.

12:46

He sent a text message to her at 7:53 a.m. Call me ASAP.

12:53

Per phone records, Karen called Clint back from Scotts Hill Elementary at 7:56 a.m. Already alarmed by the message she had just received from Kathy Wise about screaming sounds coming from her house.

13:08

Clint told her Holly's car was still there and that he thought he could see Drew with Holly in the carport. Karen immediately panicked. Having just spoken to Drew less than half an hour earlier about the hunting dispute, she told Clint, "That's not Drew." Believing Holly's boyfriend to be miles away on her mother's Bath Springs property.

13:29

Karen told Clint to call all the neighbors. At one point, she told Clint to get a gun and shoot him. Clint was confused. Karen hung up.

13:40

A fellow teacher and good friend, Terry Brummley, ushered Karen out to the parking lot and drove her back home.

13:47

While in route, Karen used Terry Brumley's phone to call 911 at 7:59 a.m.

13:53

And then she called Clint back at 8:02 a.m., though that call registered at 0 seconds, suggesting it wasn't answered.

14:01

Back at the Bobo residence, the two figures from the carport had moved.

14:06

Clint caught a glimpse of them through the back window. They were walking together toward the tree line behind the house, possibly holding hands.

14:15

Holly was not being dragged and appeared to walk voluntarily. There were no obvious signs of distress.

14:23

The family's other dog, a retriever named Champ, was walking behind them, calmly wagging his tail.

14:30

The male figure's build looked slightly different in the open air. Heavier than Daru, stockier.

14:38

The voice in the carport had sounded like Drew. The body walking toward the woods didn't match.

14:45

Clint still thought it must be Drew. Or possibly Richie Pratt, a cousin who hunted on the property sometimes.

14:53

Memory contamination is a documented phenomenon in forensic neuropsychology.

14:59

Repeated aggressive questioning reshapes how we recollect events.

15:04

Investigators sometimes introduce details unintentionally or intentionally.

15:11

Trusted authority figures like a mother on the phone or a polygraph examiner claiming to know who is lying can alter what someone believes they observed even in real time.

15:22

Rather than working through the accumulated layers of later interviews, the most reliable record is the one Clint produced that morning. his own account written in his own handwriting on the hood of a patrol car the morning Holly was taken.

15:38

Listen as my intern Kinsey reads that statement.

15:42

I was awakened from sleep by the sounds of our house dog barking. At first, I didn't think much about it because it is not unusual for me to be awakened by our dog barking in the morning. I lay there for a few minutes and he continued to bark. I decided to get up and see if someone was at our house. The dog was facing the back of the house barking, but I looked out front first. I expected to see some type of electric or utility truck checking one of the meters. I did not see any vehicles out front. I looked out back and didn't see any vehicles except my dad's dump truck, which was parked there from some time before. I looked out a different window to check out front and still didn't see any vehicles. I decided to look out the garage window to see if Holly's car was home. Before I got to the window, I heard talking coming from the garage. I listened but could not understand the words. I lifted the blind slightly and could see the partial shoulders and arms of two individuals knelt down facing each other. I called my mom right away, but she didn't answer. I text her and she called me about 20 seconds later. I asked her if Holly was out of school that day and she said no. I told her that Holly's car was at home and she panicked. She said, "Oh my god, someone has taken her." I said, "No, mom. She's in the garage talking to Drew.

16:56

Mom said that it wasn't Drew, but I told her that it was. His voice sounded the same as Drew's voice sounds when him and Holly are in Holly's room and I am in my room at night. Mom told me to call 911 and hung up. I didn't call 911 at this time because I knew that it was Holly and Drew's voice I heard in the garage.

17:14

After mom hung up, I no longer heard voices in the garage. I walked toward the back door and saw two people walking toward the woods together. They both seemed to be holding hands. The male had on full camo and the female had on a pink t-shirt and blue jeans. The female was on the left and the male on the right. They were walking together toward the woods. I only saw them for around 8 to 10 seconds before they reached the woods. Mom called back and told me to get the gun and shoot him. I told her that it was Holly and Drew and that they had just walked into the woods. I never saw their faces and they never looked back. I put on some pants and a jacket and got the pistol from my parents' room. I walked toward where they entered the woods, but I did not see or hear anything. I heard a truck coming up our driveway, so I walked toward the truck.

18:00

My neighbor, Kathy, got out of the truck and stated that her son heard screams about 15 or 20 minutes ago. I immediately called 911 at that point.

18:09

The dispatcher said, "Do you live in Decatur County?" I said, "Yes." She transferred me to another dispatcher. I told her that my sister may have been kidnapped. She said that they have an officer on the way and for me to stay on the line. I could hear the police car coming and stayed on the line until he arrived. End of statement.

18:28

Clint went to get his Crocs. He stepped outside and the cold hit him harder than he expected. So, he went back in and changed. Green sweatpants, a Drake water foul jacket, socks. He got a Colt revolver from his parents' bedroom nightstand. When he walked into the carport, he found blood on the concrete floor. A small pool of low velocity blood splatter near the garage. Four or five drops going around the passenger side of Holly's car. He reached for an explanation.

19:00

Drew had brought a turkey up for Holly to see. Then he thought, "Where is the turkey?" He walked up toward the trail. He couldn't see anyone. There were no birds, no wind. I imagine the kind of silence that doesn't feel peaceful. At 8:06 a.m. recorded precisely in the carrier data, the Scott family home phone line placed a call to Richie Pratt. Duration 1 minute and 11 seconds.

19:29

A vehicle had pulled into the driveway.

19:32

It was Kathy Wise. She told Clint her son Ed had heard screams about 15 to 20 minutes earlier. Clint called 911 at 8:08 a.m. immediately upon learning this. Law enforcement was already on the way. While on the line with emergency dispatch, Clint reports observing Decatur County Sheriff's Deputy Tony Weber arriving in his squad car.

19:58

Richie Pratt later told TBI that Drew's mother, Sheila Scott, called him that morning to tell him Clint had seen someone take Holly and to ask whether she should tell Drew.

20:11

That call happened between Karen's 7:59 a.m. 911 call and Clint's 8:08 a.m. 911 call. and before the Scott home had any other phone contact that morning, aside from a 41 second call with Drew at 7:53 a.m., which we will return to.

20:36

The question that sits inside that timing is direct.

20:40

How did the Scott household know at 8:06 a.m. that Clint had seen someone take Holly? Suspensions centered on Clint from the first moments of the investigation.

20:53

The instinct to scrutinize his account did not emerge from nowhere.

20:57

Early in the investigation, he described the clothing as regular camouflage. He provided a sample, said the pattern matched, but the abductor's version was lighter in color.

21:09

More than a year later, he brought the investigators a photograph of Leafy Wear camouflage, an entirely different style.

21:17

After his second polygraph examination, he reportedly told an agent the abductor might have been wearing all black, though he later denied the accuracy of that TVI report.

21:28

And then there was the timing.

21:31

Special agent Dykus in his June 2013 meeting with Clint laid out the math as he understood it. If the screaming Barnes heard was Holly yelling, "Stop it!" It had to have occurred before 7:47 a.m.

21:48

Clint was awake and observing people in the carport within minutes of that.

21:53

It would have been essentially impossible for Clint not to hear Holly screaming unless the screaming happened first before he woke up and before the carport interaction. Clint said he never heard a scream.

22:08

It's difficult to conceive of Holly being accosted by an abductor, sustaining an injury sufficient to produce that much blood and then interacting with him in the carport in such a manner that Clint would confuse a violent kidnapper with her boyfriend and then watch her walk voluntarily into the woods while the family dog followed calmly behind.

22:30

The prevailing belief that Clint was lying seemed less to do with his story changing over time and more to do with his story seeming to not make any sense, at least given what was known or thought about the case.

22:44

Critically, Clint's behavior was inconsistent with what most people would expect from a brother encountering a situation in which his sister was being abducted by a stranger.

22:56

Special Agent Dykus offered Clint a theory that he'd frozen that fear had paralyzed him and he was embarrassed to admit he hadn't done more. Clint rejected that. He said he simply hadn't processed what was happening as dangerous. He believed it was Drew. He believed they might have been breaking up and Holly was upset.

23:19

He thought when they walked toward the woods they had reconciled.

23:23

And many of us concluded understandably that if Clint wasn't a coward paralyzed by fear while his sister was violently apprehended, then he must somehow be involved. Every one of us who followed this case has turned that over in our minds.

23:41

He worked at a nursing home. Was he pilfering pills and got wrapped up in some drug trade?

23:47

A version of this story found its way into Audrey's testimony with the idea that Zach Adams had come to the house to teach Clint how to cook meth. Zach pointed out, as other locals with relevant expertise have corroborated, that no one was even cooking their own meth at the time. The influx into the area was such that it was cheaper to buy than to make. There is not a shred of evidence that Clint was involved in drugs aside from having smoked pot a few times or that he had any prior contact with Zach Adams, Dylan Adams, or Shane Austin. Jason Autry was notably a distant relative of the Bobo family, which was a major contradiction to his trial testimony in which he claimed not to know who Holly Bobo was.

24:31

When you said that's not Jojo, that's Holly Bobo, what'd you do?

24:38

I I was clueless. I I didn't know Holly Bobo.

24:43

You've since come to know who she was or is.

24:46

Well, pictures, TVs, pictures, and stuff like that.

24:50

So, let's be honest.

24:53

There was no evidence Clint harmed his sister or that he had any reason to.

24:58

Karen Boba put it plainly. What would be his motive just to go to hell for eternity? But his account has never made complete sense until now because there is a version of what Clint observed that suddenly becomes entirely coherent once you add in the data that was tucked away inside subfolders upon subfolders of evidence in the case file.

25:22

Drew Scott's phone records. This is where the whole story shifts.

25:29

Everything presented so far. The family's mourning, Clint's account, the scream window, the blood in the carport comes from the record as it has been publicly understood for years. It has always been confusing.

25:46

It has always invited speculation and suspicion.

25:50

Clint's account has never fully made sense as a stranger abduction.

25:55

Now, let's overlay Drew Scott's activities that morning precisely in order with timestamped cell tower records and watch the picture change.

26:08

At 5:20 a.m., Drew sent Holly a text message. Me and dad headed hunting.

26:16

That message is consistent with everything Drew later told investigators.

26:21

He was heading to the Bass Springs area to turkey hunt on property belonging to Holly's grandmother, Donna Gooff. Turkey hunters leave before sunrise. The message fits the routine.

26:33

This is the part of Drew's story everyone already knows and no one is questioning. Another hunter, Bo Brasher, had also gone out early. He was moving through the pre-dawn woods when he encountered two men dressed in camouflage still sitting in their truck.

26:49

He recognized one of them as Buu Scott, who'd umpired some of his high school baseball games. The other identified himself as Boo's son, Drew Scott. Drew explained he was dating Holly Bobo, the landowner's granddaughter, and that they had Donna's permission to hunt there.

27:08

Brasher accepted the explanation and moved on. He continued hunting the property that morning. He did not encounter Drew or Buu again. When he eventually circled back to where their truck had been parked, the vehicle was gone. That encounter, Drew and Boo on the Bass Springs property witnessed by Brasher, is public knowledge. What is not widely known is exactly when it occurred. The encounter happened at 5:40 a.m.

27:41

According to TBI investigative report 98, special agent Joe William Walker interviewed Drew and Buu together on April 19th, 2011.

27:53

Walker references Drew and Buu essentially getting run off the hunting property. If that's what happened at 5:40 a.m., where did they go next?

28:04

I went to the cellular tower records for that answer. You'll recall between 7:18 and 7:29 a.m. Holly makes and receives a series of attempts with Drew's number.

28:18

Two phones trying to reach each other repeatedly inside a short window, but neither connecting. During this entire window, every single one of those call attempts, both phones are registered on the same tower sector, Holly's home sector. Sector three, the northwest sector of the Pleasantry Decaturville Tower, the sector that primarily serves the area surrounding the Bobo residents in the unincorporated community of Darden west and slightly north of Parsons.

28:53

Drew's phone, which had registered on the Bath Springs Tower sector at 5:40 a.m., was no longer in Bath Springs.

29:02

It was on the same sector as Holly's phone. The same general coverage area as the Bobo house. Tower coverage is not GPS precision. A single sector can cover a meaningful geographic area, and that caveat deserves acknowledgement.

29:20

But the Bass Springs Tower, where Drew's phone registered at 5:40, is not near Holly's home sector. The coverage zones are distinct. Remember, Karen called Drew at 7:31 a.m. We know this. It's part of the established timeline.

29:39

What Karen did not know, what she could not have known is what the cellular tower was recording at that exact moment.

29:47

Drew's phone was not registered on the Bass Springs Tower anymore, southeast of Parsons. It was registering on Holly's home tower sector northwest of Parsons.

At the exact time he was representing to Karen that he was in Bass Springs turkey hunting, he was referencing a conversation that had happened nearly two hours earlier, as though it was unfolding in real time.

30:13

The inconsistency between what Drew said and what the tower recorded is direct and requires an explanation. The reviewed materials in this case file do not contain one. And now consider what that call accomplished from Karen's perspective.

30:31

She had been dealing with this hunting property dispute since Holly called her at 7:21 a.m.

30:38

She had called her mother. She had stayed in her car instead of walking into school. Then she called Drew, told him he could stay on the Bass Springs property and continue to hunt, and went inside the school. She was a few minutes late to her class. Karen's certainty that Drew was in Bath Springs. That certainty that led her to tell Clint that's not Drew was built entirely on that phone call. The phone call where Drew's phone was in Holly's home sector, not in Bass Springs.

31:11

At exactly 7:33 a.m., four independent things happen simultaneously.

31:18

First, Karen's call with Drew ends.

31:22

Second, Holly's phone places a 0 second call to Drew's number and then goes silent for 6 minutes.

31:31

Third, Drew's phone also goes silent for the same six minutes.

31:38

And fourth, Chad Marshall calls Clint Bobo at 7:33 a.m. and 18 seconds. It is in those 6 minutes of cell phone inactivity where neighbors report hearing a woman screaming from the direction of the Bobo property. Ed Barnes hears the shouting and the bone chilling scream. And John Bab also hears a howling sound he initially attributes to cats fighting.

32:08

Then Barnes drives to the Bobo property.

32:11

He shuts off his engine and sits in the driveway listening. Clint is awoken by the dog barking, sees what he believes to be Holly and Drew kneeling, arguing in the carport. Minutes later, they are walking out to the woodline.

32:26

Holly appears to be going willingly.

32:29

Their body language gives Clint the impression they must have made up. Only now the male figure in camo looks stalkier, older, and doesn't seem to match the voice from the garage, which he had understood to be Drew.

32:45

The body type Clint is now observing looks more like Richie Pratt, who like Drew's dad, Buu, is older and heavier set compared to Drew's leaner 19-year-old frame. The 7:33 a.m.

32:58

convergence is where several independent threads arrive at the same moment.

33:04

Karen's call ends. Holly's phone goes dark. Drew's phone goes dark. Chad calls Clint. all inside the same narrow window in which two neighbors independently report hearing indicators of distress from the Bobo property.

33:22

It was not unusual for Chad to call Clint in the mornings, but the precision of that 733 convergence is noteworthy.

33:30

The 6-minute window of cell phone inactivity ended at 7:40 a.m. when Drew's phone dialed Holly's number. 0 seconds. At 7:41 a.m., Drew receives a text from Holly's phone.

33:45

Well, you're still going to hunt there.

33:48

The text message on its surface appears to be a followup on the hunting property dispute. The reason Karen had just called Drew. The reason Karen had been late for school. Notably, there was no prior connected call or text exchange between Holly and Drew since Drew's call with Karen ended. This message appears curiously out of place in that context.

34:12

And 7:41 a.m. is immediately after the 6-minute window in which neighbors reported hearing screams.

34:20

If Holly sent that message at 7:41 a.m., it means she was texting her boyfriend about a turkey hunting property dispute while in the carport with her kidnapper.

34:32

It seems unlikely Holly could have used her phone at that moment at all. And if somehow she could, it seems even less likely she would use the opportunity to follow up on a hunting issue rather than to signal she was in danger. The text appears in the carrier call detail records. It does not appear in the SIM card extraction from Holly's phone, which is absent of any data after 5:20 a.m. that morning. a discrepancy that was apparently never noticed or investigated.

The timing of that text sent from Holly's phone during the window in which she was almost certainly not in a position to send it does something specific for Drew. It places the hunting dispute firmly in the foreground. It reinforces the 731 call that Karen placed to Drew on the other side of town. and it sits comfortably inside a public narrative of what that morning was about.

35:33

At 7:42 a.m., Drew calls Holly again. 0 seconds.

35:40

At 7:53 a.m., the Scott household phone placed a call to Drew's cell phone.

35:47

Duration 41 seconds. This call corresponds to the period when, according to Clint's account, he was watching the two figures walking toward the woodline. The moment his certainty about Drew's identity began to loosen.

36:02

When he noticed the man in camo appeared to have a stockier, older male frame.

36:07

The moment he thought, "Maybe that's not Drew. Maybe it's more like Richie Pratt." After hanging up with his mom, Drew immediately calls Holly. No answer. At 8:06 a.m., the Scott household phone calls Richie Pratt. Duration 1 minute and 11 seconds. Per Richie's own statement to TBI, investigator report 358, authored by special agent Brett Booth, Drew's mom, Sheila, called him to say that Clint had seen somebody take Holly and to ask whether Drew should be told.

36:44

This is where we need to pause and stay with the sequence. The 753 call to Drew.

36:52

The 754 attempt from Drew to reach Holly.

36:57

The 806 call to Richie 2 minutes before Clint dialed 911.

37:04

Drew's parents, per their statements to investigators, denied having any other phone numbers. The only phone activity on the Scott home line before the 806 call to Richie was the 753 call to Drew.

37:19

If Sheila had just spoken with Drew at 753 after he had, per Richie's account already arrived at work, we'll get to that. Why was the next call to Richie rather than just calling Drew back directly?

37:34

and how did the Scott household know enough by 8:06 a.m. to be placing this call?

37:42

Kinsey's now going to read you the TBI investigative report 358 authored by special agent Brent Booth. On August 31st, 2011 at approximately 5 p.m.

37:54

Richie Wade Pratt was interviewed at the Parsons Police Department in Parsons, Tennessee. Present for the interview were Special Agent Steve Champion of the FBI and Special Agent Brent Booth of the TBI. After the purpose of the interview was given, he voluntarily provided the following information. Richie Pratt said, "Clint called me 7:30 or 8:00 p.m.

38:16

on the 12th of April. It was casual conversation. He had bought oil for his four-wheeler to do an oil change. He was complaining about how high the price of oil was. He asked me about turkey hunting. He asked me if I had been out there, meaning had I been to the woods and fields out by their house. He asked if I was going turkey hunting in the morning. In hindsight, his conversation with me had no point. It bothered me. I hadn't talked to him since duck season.

38:42

We don't turkey hunt together, and we are not riding four-wheelers together.

38:46

When I go turkey hunting out there, I park on that trail above the house and walk down to those fields. He said, "On April 13th, 2011, Sheila Scott called me that morning and told me Clint saw somebody take Holly. She asked me if I thought it would be a good idea to tell Drew. I told the supervisor and asked him if I should tell Drew. We agreed.

39:06

And to tell him, I called him into the break room and told him what Sheila told me, and he left work immediately. I then called my mother and dad and Leonard Bobo and Dennis Tolley." Richie was asked what he knew about Clint having a temper and he said he never saw Clint in a rage. He said the last time he talked to Holly was a couple of weeks before she was missing.

39:27

She was at Drew's house and Richie was next door at his girlfriend's house.

39:30

Drew's aunt. He said a white male firstname unknown Sanders hangs out at Drews. Petey, last name unknown, works 911 at Holiday Tennessee. Dylan Maxwell hangs out at Drews.

39:44

Pratt said PD is about my height, close to the same build as me. He is kind of strange, quiet. He hangs out all the time at Drews and was never around until all this happened. He drives a gray Silverado pickup and lives on the south end of Tecar County. He described Pey as a white male, short reddish brown hair, wears a cap. He tried to turkey hunt the first time this year. Richie said Clint told him the guy he saw was less than 5'11 and less than 230 lb. End of report.

40:14

Several things stand out in this report.

40:17

The first is the call Clintis to Richie the night before on April 12th. Richie said he found it strange. Clint asked him if he had been out to the woods near their house, whether he had planned to go turkey hunting in the morning. Richie notes they don't hunt together. They hadn't spoken since duck season.

The conversation seemed to have no point.

40:40

The second is Richie's relationship to Drew.

40:44

Richie is in a committed romantic relationship with Lisa Douglas, Drew's maternal aunt, who lives next door to the Scott family. Richie got Drew his job with the city of Parsons.

40:56

Richie is the only person in the reviewed materials who places Drew at the work site before 8 a.m. That is a factual statement about the evidentiary record, not a judgment about Pratt's honesty.

41:09

The third is Richie's description of someone named Petey, described as having a similar build to Richie himself, which also happens to match the build description Clint gave investigators.

41:23

Petey hangs out at Drews. He was never around until all this happened. He had tried turkey hunting for the first time this year. My understanding is that Pety was a Decar County 911 dispatcher in Holiday who was working on the morning of April 13th and that Drew moved in with him briefly right after Holly went missing.

41:46

that detail. Someone new to Drew's social circle similar in Richie to build who suddenly appeared and then disappeared after the abduction and with whom Drew went to live in the days that followed sits in the investigative record without any documented followup in the reviewed materials. And now I'm going to have Kinsey read you that investigative report 98 authored by special agent Joe William Walker from his interview on May 23rd, 2011, which he conducted with Drew and his father together on April 19th of 2011.

42:23

A meeting was held at the National Guard Armory in Parsons, Tennessee between Buu and Drew Scott and Special Agent Joe Walker to try and obtain additional information from Drew Scott about victim Bobo. The last time Drew talked with victim Bobo was at 7:31 a.m. on Wednesday, April 13th, 2011. This call was for 1 minute and 33 seconds. Last time he received a text from victim Bobo was at 7:41 a.m. This text stated, "Well, you're still going to hunt there." This is in reference to Drew and his father, Buu, getting basically run off of Karen Bobo's mother's property that morning where they were turkey hunting. Drew said victim Bobo had not had any troubles with anyone on Facebook. Drew said she would have told him if she had. Drew said anytime victim Bobo had even a wrong look from someone, she told him about it. Drew said he and victim Bobo started talking in June of 2010. Drew said they had been talking for a while before they started dating.

43:24

Drew debunked the story he and victim Bobo were in a club in Jackson the Saturday night before the abduction.

43:30

Drew said they had never been in a club together. Drew said they did not do that. Drew said no one had seen Jonathan Dodd or his four-wheeler since Wednesday night. Drew had this to say about the following people. Shane Austin was nuts and on drugs. DC Su had once tried to talk to victim Bobo. She did not like this. Kevin Dixon, Clint, Drew, and Victim Bobo were going to get something and he rode with them. Victim Bobo said she felt very uncomfortable around him.

43:57

Lee Boggas, he called her at 2 or 3 in the morning one time. Blake Hickerson, he is trouble but is nothing to victim Bobo. And Grant Adams fits the description. He is from Lexington and he is a friend of Victim Bobo on Facebook. End of report.

44:13

Several problems with this report require explicit attention. First, Drew and his father are interviewed together.

44:20

Again, the same approach was taken with Terry and Janet Britt. Interviewing potential witnesses or persons of interest together compromises the independence of each account. Law enforcement just needs to do better here.

44:34

Second, the report says the last time Drew talked with Holly was at 7:31 a.m.

44:41

The 1 minute and 34 second call it describes as Drew's last contact with Holly was actually Karen's call to Drew, not Holly's. That's a factual error in the investigative report. Either Drew told Walker it was Holly he spoke with when it was Karen, or Walker introduced that detail himself when recording his notes. Neither option is reassuring.

45:06

Third, Walker references Drew and Boo's quote getting basically run off the hunting property. If that is what happened at 5:40 a.m., if Brasher's presence prompted Drew and Buu to leave, where did they go? The record doesn't say. The key elements of Clint's account have remained stable across every telling.

two figures. The carport area. They were kneeling. The male was wearing camouflage. Holly was upset. They walked into the woods. He found blood. He never heard a scream. The elements that shifted were peripheral. The precise camo pattern, whether there was a face covering. For someone observing briefly through a gap in Venetian blinds in early morning light while still not fully awake, those are exactly the kind of details that drift. The stable elements are structural. They describe what happened. The shifting elements describe what someone partially awake glimpsed at a distance through a window while simultaneously receiving information from his mother, a trusted source that contradicted what he was observing directly. Of all the witnesses in this case, Clint's story is one of the most internally consistent across tellings.

46:29

And yet, it had never made sense.

46:31

Consider an alternative frame. What if Clint saw exactly what he said he saw?

46:37

What if it was Holly and Drew in the carport? What if the male voice he heard and recognized as Drews was in fact Drews?

46:46

What if Drew was there on the Boba property that morning while simultaneously having led Karen to believe via a phone call from that same property that he was in Bass Springs?

46:57

And what if Holly was walking toward the woodline with someone else? A second man in camo, someone stalkier than Drew, more like Richie Pratt's build or Boo Scott.

47:09

While Drew was still near Holly's car, perhaps he was gathering Holly's belongings.

47:15

Clint never saw either of the figures that were walking toward the tree line holding anything aside from a single black object in the male's hand, like a bird call approximately 6 to 8 in long.

47:29

Holly would have been injured. We know that from the blood. Yet she was somehow carrying a purse, a lunchbox with strap, and notebooks.

47:40

None of them visible from Clint's vantage point.

47:43

Clint is studying her at this point, trying to figure out what's going on, paying close enough attention to describe the object in the male's hand.

47:52

He would have noticed all her belongings had she been carrying them.

47:56

But in this frame, with Drew still back in the carport gathering Holly's things, everything about Clint's account suddenly coheres.

48:05

The voice in the carport sounded like Drew because it was. The figure walking with Holly toward the woods didn't match Drew's build because it wasn't Drew.

48:15

The explanation that accumulated around this case, the one that placed primary suspicion on Clint and later on a separate group of men connected through a complex chain of jailhouse testimony and informant activity required a significant number of far-fetched assumptions to hold together.

48:36

It required Clint to be concealing something while simultaneously failing to benefit from that concealment.

48:43

It required his delayed 911 call to reflect guilt rather than confusion.

48:49

It required his changing descriptions to indicate fabrication.

48:53

It required the Adams brothers and Jason Autry, whose alibis had already been checked and confirmed by lead investigators, including the TBI agent who later testified for the defense, to have suddenly become the answer to a case that had pointed elsewhere for years. Each of those assumptions might be individually possible, but together they constitute a kind of complexity that begins to strain reasoning.

49:21

Consider what the existing record now offers without adding a single fact that wasn't already in the case file.

49:29

At 5:40 a.m., Drew and Boo Scott were on the Bass Springs property. Their truck was gone when Brasher returned hours later. The record does not establish where they went.

49:42

Between 7:18 and 7:31, Drew's phone is registering on Holly's home tower sector, miles from Bath Springs, on the opposite side of Parson's, while the carrier data shows repeated failed call attempts between Drew's number and Holly's.

50:02

At 7:31 a.m., Drew led Karen to believe he was in Bass Springs.

50:08

but his phone was no longer on the Bass Springs Tower. At 7:33 a.m., Karen's call ended.

50:17

Holly's phone went dark, Drew's phone went dark, and Chad Marshall called Clint, all inside the same narrow window in which two neighbors reported hearing a woman screaming from the Bobo property. At 7:41 a.m., a text was sent from Holly's phone that functioned to explain and support the narrative Drew had given Karen about a hunting dispute in Bass Springs during a window when Holly almost certainly could not have sent it. At 7:53 a.m., the Scott home called Drew. 41 seconds.

50:56

At 8:06 a.m., two minutes before Clint calls 911, the Scott home called Richie Pratt to say that Holly had been taken.

51:06

Richie Pratt, Drew's alibi, the man who placed Drew at work before 8 a.m. The only person in the reviewed materials who did so. a man whose relationship to the Scott family was so close he had gotten Drew his job whose girlfriend was Drew's aunt who lived next door to the Scots and who was the only other individual besides Drew and the victim to be specifically named by Clint the sole eyewitness and then there's Boo Scott per Drew's brother Derek who worked with Buu at the food Giant Buu arrived at work at approximately 7:50 a.m. still in his hunting camouflage and immediately told Derek that someone had taken Holly.

51:57

At 7:50 a.m., Clint had not yet reached Karen and Karen had not yet called 911.

52:05

No documented account explains how Boo would know that that early. None of this constitutes proof.

52:12

The cellular tower data cannot tell us what happened in the carport. It can't explain the blood. It can't account for every detail.

52:22

What it can say is that the version of Drew's morning that everyone has been working from that he was in Bass Springs hunting when Holly was taken is directly contradicted by an objective record. His phone was not in Bass Springs, and the hunting dispute he presented to Karen as a current problem had already been resolved two hours earlier.

52:47

The call to Karen at 7:31 a.m. was placed from a phone registering on Holly's home sector.

52:53

It presented a past event as a present one and it gave Karen a reason, a compelling, urgent in the-moment reason to be certain Drew was somewhere he demonstrably was not.

53:08

At 8:26 a.m., Drew's phone registered on the Shiloh Road sector, the same sector where Holly's phone stopped moving between 8:26 and 8:56 that morning, and where her skeletal remains were ultimately discovered by Jensing Hunters in September of 2014.

53:27

Aam's razor doesn't promise clarity.

53:31

It only suggests that when two or more explanations exist, the one that requires less invention deserves more attention. Drew Scott's phone was not in Bass Springs when he told Karen that's where he was. It was on Holly's home sector. The hunting dispute he presented as happening in real time had concluded two hours prior.

53:54

The six-minute silence that followed the end of Karen's call overlaps precisely with the window in which neighbors heard screaming from the Bobo property. The text message that corroborated Drew's story was sent from a phone that almost certainly could not have been in Holly's hands at the time it was sent. And the only person besides Drew's dad who places Drew at work before 8 a.m. is a man with close personal and professional ties to the Scott family, who was called by the Scott family before Clinto even dialed 911.

54:32

Now, the question becomes, in the most expensive, exhaustive investigation in the history of Tennessee, why am I the first one bringing any of this to your attention?
